The statements of Schneider and the admission of Pearl caused the arrest of herself and her father late yesterday, and it is believed that in the fright caused by his arrest and the nature of the charge which is to be brought against him, Nick Bahmer has told Mrs. E. E. of things which happened on the Phillips farm the night of Sept. 14 which hitherto had been kept secret.

HYSTERIA MAKING INQUIRY DIFFICULT, SAYS PROSECUTOR.

The Prosecutors said today that the state of the public mind in New Brunswick had become so hysterical over the murders that the work of an orderly investigation and prosecution was becoming complicated to the point where it was almost impossible to get results.

The circumstantial facts of yesterday, which was widely published, that an inmate of the Home of the Aged—which is more than a mile from the Phillips farm—had seen the murder of the minister and Mrs. Mills from the window of the home, was mentioned by the Prosecutors as one of the causes of this excitement.

Another was a yarn, just as widely published today on apparently reliable information, that a basket of bloodstained clothing was beside the bodies of the murdered pair when the Bahmer girl and Schneider first gave the alarm, but disappeared soon afterward.

It had no more foundation than that in the search of the premises immediately after the murder one of the detectives found a basket into which a chicken had apparently been thrown after its head was cut off. Instead of "bloody clothing" the basket had nothing more incriminating on its slats than chicken feathers.

COURT HOUSE CUSTODIAN ATTACKED BY CROWDS.

The serious effect of such reports was shown last night when Frank P. Kirby, an assistant custodian of the Court House, was twice attacked by gatherings of men and young women who had heard that he had falsely accused Clifford Hayes of admitting the truth of Schneider's "confession."

It was true that Prosecutor Stricker asked Kirby to talk to Hayes, knowing that the two were friends, and tell him that "no harm could come of telling the whole truth." But instead of returning to say that Hayes admitted Schneider's accusation had truth in it, Kirby reported to Mr. Stricker that he didn't believe Hayes knew a thing about the murders.

Nevertheless, the rumor got about that Kirby was responsible for the charge against Hayes. About twenty young men, with girls urging them on, surrounded him as he came from the Court House last night. He was then taken to the Assemblyman Raymond Lyons and a devoted friend of the Hayes family.

Some of the older and staid-headed relatives of those in the party heeding Kirby appeared and the party was dispersed. Policemen took Kirby to Police Headquarters for his own protection. While he was there talking with the men on reserve duty a crowd of over a hundred surged up to the door at 2 o'clock this morning, yelling: "Tar and feather him!" "To hell with informers!" The reserves had to make a show of force to drive them away. There is hysteria in the air of the town.

LYONS ARRESTED FOR LEADING PARTY.

Kirby spent the night in the cellar of Police Headquarters. Lyons was arrested, but when Recorder Tindall convened court at 9 o'clock today Kirby refused to press a charge against him.

"Yes, and you will get out of town," shouted Kirby, while fifty spectators cheered him as he walked out of the courtroom.

A sober evidence of public feeling in the forming of a Hayes Aid Committee, starting with the members of the Landing Club, an altogether social organization of which Hayes himself was never a member. A meeting was held last night at which it was determined that a "Tag Day" to raise funds for the defense of Hayes should be declared Saturday. Russell Reilly was appointed chairman, John Conner, starting with the members of the Landing Club, an altogether social organization of which Hayes himself was never a member. The tags will be small discs, one side bearing "Clifford Hayes Justice Fund" and the other Ruskin's line, "The truth in one's heart does not fear the lie on the other's tongue."

THINK BAHMERS MAY KNOW ADDITIONAL FACTS.

Some of the investigators seem to believe Bahmer and his daughter know more than they have told about the murder. Bahmer has admitted having a pistol the night of the murder. He says he borrowed it of "get" Schneider, and that it was a .45. But he refuses to tell from whom he borrowed it, or what he did with it. His daughter says she carried a gun all the time.

Pearl Bahmer has added to the tangled and confused mass of information and misinformation another chapter of which there is no explanation. Pearl had regarded it as so casual and unimportant that she did not mention it before. She had related on Monday how Mrs. Raymond Schneider of South River had written her to stay away from Schneider and had said: "When this case comes to trial I'll beat you to it." This letter, Pearl said, was delayed Monday morning, following the finding of the bodies, and on the same day Mrs. Schneider herself appeared and asked Pearl to accompany her to the Phillips farm.

Pearl's addition to the story is this: "I showed her the spot at which Raymond and I found the two bodies. It was nearly dark. Mrs. Schneider said: 'Let's go to the

Accuser of Clifford Hayes Says He Fled After Double Killing, but Knew Then Mistake Was Made.

The verbatim statement of Raymond Schneider accusing Clifford Hayes of the murder of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. James Mills, as given out, reads:

"Statement of Raymond C. Schneider, made in the presence of County Detective Ferd David, Deputy Sheriff Frank P. Kirby and State Police Trooper Dickerman on the morning of Oct. 2, 1922:

"I and Clifford Hayes left the Rivoli Theatre about 10:35 P. M. Thursday night and followed Mr. Bahmer and his daughter Pearl up George Street to Hamilton, then to College Avenue, up College Avenue to McCauley's Lane and thence to Eastern Avenue, where we lost track of them. Hayes and I went through De Rusey's gulley and when about three-quarters of the way up we came across a man and woman. Hayes said to me, 'There they are,' and pulled a gun from his pocket and fired three or four times.

"I was about four feet away when Hayes fired and I then started to run toward De Rusey's lane, which was a short distance away, and on arriving at the lane I started to walk toward the Eastern Avenue road, where I met Kauffman with a machine, who asked me take a 'ride down.' 'I told him that Hayes was coming and we waited. Shortly Hayes came along and we all three drove down to Buccleugh, when Hayes and I got out. Kauffman going home. Hayes and I remained together a short time and we parted, Hayes going home and I too.

"The next morning, which was Friday, I again went out looking for mushrooms, along with Pearl Bahmer, and again on Saturday when we came across Mr. Hall's and Mrs. Mills's bodies. I immediately ran to the house of Mrs. Stricker and telephoned to the police. On the night that Hayes shot Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills I knew a mistake had been made. I did not touch the bodies, but Hayes pulled Mrs. Mills's scarf that she had worn over her face and Mr. Hall's hat partly over his face.

"I do not know what became of the gun after the shooting. And all I am sorry for now is that I did not report this sooner."

house. I had not known there was a house there, though Raymond and I had been in the fields there many times.

"We walked to the back door of the house and Mrs. Schneider tried the door. It was locked. She reached into her bag and took out a key and opened the door. Then she turned to me and said it was the key to her house in South River. I was afraid to go in. It was very dark.

"She went in as though she knew the place. She stayed about ten minutes. I don't know how many rooms she went into. Then she came out. No, she didn't bring anything with her except some magazines she had been carrying."

"The girl is telling the absolute truth about the key," Mrs. Schneider said when told of Pearl's story.

"When we went up on the porch of the farm house I said, 'I wonder what it is like inside,' and just for luck I tried the key of the door of my home in the lock. Nobody could have been more surprised than I was when the lock turned. For I had never been in the house before and had never heard of it until I went up there with Pearl Bahmer to look at the place where the bodies were found and saw it."

PEARL DECLARES SHE WILL COMMIT SUICIDE.

After Pearl Bahmer had been committed to jail for a week last night she declared: "After all this is over I'll jump in the river—and go down three times this time." She referred to her suicide attempt in the Raritan Canal that failed recently. She said she supposed her father would cut her throat for what she had told about him, but that she didn't care if he did.

Bahmer declared he would be able to prove that his daughter's charge against him was impossible. He talked freely about carrying a pistol the night of the murder.

"Where did you get the pistol?" he was asked.

"I borrowed it."

"From whom?"

"Now, you're going too deep, son. I don't want to talk about this thing. Anyway, this is a frame-up. They're trying to hold me in this case and I have nothing to do with it."

"Do you think Hayes killed Mrs. Mills and Dr. Hall?"

"I could get down on my knees and swear Hayes didn't kill them."

"If you are so positive Hayes did not kill Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills, who do you think did kill them?"

"I think Schneider killed them."

"What makes you say that?"

"Never mind, I know that boy."

"Then you think it was Schneider, thinking that Pearl was out on the Phillips farm with some one else, shot him by certain of his friends and relatives. She is holding her plans for legal action in abeyance pending the arrival of her attorney, Harry Gamble, from New Orleans. He is expected here today.

Mrs. de Bouchel asserted that the difficulties in which her romance had become involved were due entirely to a "conspiracy" by members of the Candler family, inspired by a fear of losing some of the Asa Candler fortune.

"I did not want his money," she said, with her dark eyes flashing, "I have all the money I need or want. I was drawn to him out of sympathy for his loneliness and out of admiration for what I thought to be his gentleness, his generosity and his rugged virtues."

"I thought him almost a superman in strength and goodness. He recalled the years when his children were growing up in his home, how his daughter used to run to the door and throw her arms around her daddy's neck. But now, he told me, they seemed to have grown away from him. He appealed to me as a great lonely man, heart hungry for sympathetic companionship."

"Now I have found that he is not strong, but has been away like me of putty by his relatives who are envious of me and jealous of the fortune they hope to inherit. My regret is not at losing him, but losing my illusions about him."

"At heart I believe that he yearns for the Utopia we had planned, but he was overcome by the desires of others. The worst of all was his lack of faith in me."

"That he could be made to believe in the face of my proof the slanderous statements of dastards; that I should be condemned without a hearing—and these things have scared me."

"I listened to Hayes's statement, and it will open the public's eyes. He is a wonderful boy—bright, honest and clear-minded. I have the utmost confidence in him."

It was learned that Mr. Hagerty and Mr. Brown went over Hayes's movements for ten days preceding the crime to the time he was arrested. Later at his home, Mr. Hagerty said Hayes had accounted for every movement of his time on the night of the murder.

"He denies emphatically that he was anywhere near the scene of the crime when it occurred," the lawyer stated.

"What about the story of Leon Kauffman that Hayes, Schneider and he met and followed Pearl Bahmer and her father?" Mr. Hagerty was asked.

"That has discrepancies in it," he replied. "He was with Schneider up to the time they reached the culvert."

"After that?"

"I'd rather not say. But Senator Brown and I are firmly of the opinion that the boy is innocent."

"Did he know anything of the affair between Schneider and Pearl Bahmer?"

"He did not. He only met Pearl Bahmer once."

Walter C. Sedam of New Brunswick was engaged as counsel for Schneider. He immediately set out to obtain bail for the youth. He said he expected to have him free to-morrow evening.

TURKS PROTEST, THEN SIGN TRUCE; GREEKS DECLINE

Terms Not Fully Approved by Athens; Allies Vouch for Them.

Did Not Hold to Promises Given, Kemal's Representative Declares.

MUDANIA, Oct. 11.—The final agreement on all points in the armistice convention was reached by the conferees at 11 o'clock last evening after two sessions of the delegates. Then followed a recess while the Secretaries made formal copies which the delegates verified, and it was about daybreak before the final signatures were affixed.

The agreement is under date of midnight to-night, however, and goes into effect, according to its final clause, "three days after signature, that is, midnight, Oct. 14-15."

The Greeks refused to sign the convention because they were out of touch with their home Government and the terms were not fully approved by the Athens authorities. The Turks, however, will look to the Allies to see that the Greeks fulfill the conditions of the armistice and received assurances to that effect.

The armistice convention contains the exact terms as submitted by Lieut. Gen. Harington, the British delegate, the specifications of which were printed yesterday.

Ismet Pasha, the Turkish representative, held out for a larger number of gendarmes in Eastern Thrace and argued lengthily on several other points, but eventually gave way on every point of the Allied demands.

Geh. Harington and Gen. Charpy, the French delegate, left for Constantinople this morning after a few hours' sleep aboard their warships.

The changed attitude of the French delegates, who previously had supported the Turkish stand, is believed to have contributed largely to the readiness with which the Kemalists yielded.

Before signing, Ismet Pasha is said to have protested that the terms were in contradiction to the assurances originally given him by Gen. Charpy. He was told, however, that the French delegate had assented to the new demands.

RODOSTO, Thrace, Oct. 11 (Associated Press).—Five thousand Turkish Nationalist soldiers in civilian attire have filtered into Eastern Thrace during the last fortnight, through this city and other ports on the Sea of Marmora, for the purpose of facilitating the Turkish occupation of the province, according to information received by the Allied mission here.

The Kemalists soldiers have mostly come in with groups of refugees, making their detection difficult.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 11 (Associated Press).—It is reported that the Turkish Nationalist Ministry of Finance has issued a statement declaring that all conventions, treaties, contracts and decrees promulgated by the Government of the Sultan since March 16, 1920, are regarded by the Kemalists as null and void.

The date referred to marked the Allied occupation of Constantinople.

local Examiner John Riegelman and Robert Stettler, morgue expert, brought the conclusion this morning, however, that instead of the complete left leg the upper right leg and the lower left leg had been found.

This led to the conclusion that fear of discovery had led the slayer or slayers to throw their possessions into one bundle in a hurried disposition of them. It is believed possible all parts of the body were gotten rid of in a single automobile trip.

Capt. Harry Duane and detectives of the Sixth District working with him regard the find as the most important yet made. The body has now been reconstructed with the exception of the upper left leg and the lower right leg.

Near the arm and leg policemen found a bundle containing two shirts and an undershirt, bloodstained, and a 14¢ collar. The shirts were wrapped in an evening newspaper of Sept. 27. Near the shirts was found a pair of blood-stained child's bloomers, which had been slashed as if by a knife.

From the manner in which the shirts were hacked and slashed, the police believe the victim's body was cut up while he was still fully dressed. Everything thus far learned by the

TANKER SWIFT STAR 37 IN CREW ABOARD ASHORE, IN DANGER

Captain Radios She Is Likely to Break Up Two Miles South of Block Island.

The tanker Swift Star, belonging to C. D. Mallory & Co., No. 11 Broadway, went ashore two miles south of Block Island, not far from New London, Conn., early to-day and is in danger of breaking up, according to a radio broadcast by her commander, Capt. Kenny, and picked up here.

The radio said the crew of 37 is sticking to the tanker, which has her side against a heavy sea, in the hope that they may yet get her off.

"But we may have to abandon her this afternoon or to-night," added Capt. Kenny's message.

The Swift Star, a steamer of 5,000 tons, left San Pedro, Mexico, Sept. 19, bound for Fall River, Mass. On learning of her plight this morning the Mallory Company arranged for the immediate despatch of tugs to aid her.

The White Star Line's Homerio, which cleared from Southampton today with her usual supply of liquor for the bar, would be immune however, and will not be molested when she enters New York, as she left her home port prior to Oct. 14.

ALL RUM ON SHIPS MUST BE LISTED, IF U. S. WINS SUIT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The Government stressed in argument in the Supreme Court today the importance in the enforcement of the Prohibition and Anti-Narcotic Acts of a ruling by the highest court that all articles aboard vessels entering American ports, including those whose importation is forbidden, be formally reported to the customs officers.

The case at issue reached the court in an appeal brought by the Government from an adverse decision in the lower Federal Courts in proceedings brought against Wesley L. Sischo, who in operating a vessel upon the Pacific Coast failed to enter upon his customs manifest the presence aboard of narcotics. The substance of the ruling of the lower court was that, the importation of certain drugs having been prohibited, Sischo had violated no law in not reporting that there was opium aboard.

The Government, through A. A. Wheat, special assistant to the Solicitor General, in the Supreme Court today emphasized the importance, especially after the recent ruling of the Attorney General relative to intoxicating liquors aboard vessels entering American ports, of a complete report which would show enforcement officers at a glance whether there was any liquor aboard.

"I'm going to make some drastic changes," threatened the Mayor.

"I hope you'll ask me to help you," said Guinness. "There are many drastic changes needed in the Fire Department and I'll be glad to help you."

"I don't want any of your help," the Mayor yelled. "I'll tell you something, Guinness, right now. You're through running the Fire Department. Don't forget that, Mr. Guinness, you're through."

"Any one else wishing to be heard," calmly proceeded the Mayor. "Less intelligent than the Mayor's attitude in denying the petition of the policemen for an increase from $2,350 to $2,500 a year presented by Joseph Moran, President of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association. The Mayor said he was glad that Moran had not attended the Board of Estimate hearing with the entire police force. Moran declared there was wide public sentiment in favor of the patrolmen's increase. Comptroller Craig explained it meant the city would exceed its debt limit by $1,500,000 if granted."
